Together for a fairer world.

Conflicts, climate change, and economic and social crises are reshaping geopolitical balances and generating an increasing number of crises, of an increasingly complex nature, an increasingly long duration and which effects are increasing humanitarian needs. In this scenario, we are called upon to respond in ever shorter timeframes and in ever more unstable contexts. Moreover, a response that is limited to the emergency is no longer adequate: it must start from immediate needs without losing sight of medium and long-term development. Over the past year, we have responded to the urgent needs of the Palestinian population in Gaza and the West Bank - where we have been working for more than 30 years - and of the Lebanese population under attack, adapting our interventions to the changing needs each day. In Syria, we have witnessed the collapse of a regime that lasted half a century, reshaping our intervention in a context that remains uncertain. The cornerstones of our action remain the efforts to guarantee a dignified life to the syrian population and the tools to be able to rebuild what has been destroyed and to allow for the recovery of the country's economy. This medium and long-term vision is one of the key aspects of our work and our new strategy. We do not just want to put the people we work for at the centre, but to make them an active part of the interventions that involve them. This is even more true for young people and children, who are too often excluded from the processes that affect their future. We are committed to building a future with them, which they can shape, a right to the future that they can direct. It is our priority: in November, we presented our latest World Index together with ChildFund Alliance at the United Nations in New York, which paints an alarming picture of children's rights and of the work still to be done - work for which we will not cease to commit, designing innovative and integrated approaches, for a world in which every person can live with dignity, safety and prospects for the future.

Dina Taddia, WeWorld CEO

WeWorld works to guarantee the fundamental rights of every person; our commitment is equally strong in Italy, where social and economic inequalities continue to increase. The pandemic has affected women and minors the hardest, the energy crisis has generated new poverties, and the peripheral areas of cities have increasingly become places of marginality. In this context,

WeWorld works to leave no one behind, with particular attention to women, children and adolescents. We achieve this through direct intervention, awareness-raising and advocacy initiatives, refining a model of action that takes into account the complexity of vulnerabilities. We know that it is not enough to provide services: we need a structural response. That is why, in our Spazi Donna (Women's Spaces) throughout Italy, we support women in difficult situations, offering pathways to autonomy and independence. We work with the new generations, in and out of schools, to ensure inclusive and quality education, contrasting educational poverty and promoting active participation. However, our commitment goes further. We are convinced that social justice comes through policies that put the right to the future of each person at the centre. Mothers who have to choose between work and care, young people who have to live with precariousness, children without access to essential services: these categories are often left alone in Italy today. Talking about families without concretely addressing their needs means not tackling the root of the problem. We need policies that guarantee equal opportunities, which do not merely respond to the emergency but build a fairer and more equitable future. For over 50 years, WeWorld has been working for a world where gender, age or the place of birth are not factors of exclusion. We believe that the right to the future cannot be a privilege for the few, but must be guaranteed to all. And we will continue to work for this goal, in Italy and around the world, every day.

Marco Chiesara, WeWorld President

WASH

Our WASH (water, sanitation and hygiene) intervention focuses on safe, equitable and inclusive access to water and sanitation, through the construction and rehabilitation of water infrastructure and, in emergency contexts, also through the distribution of appropriate water and sanitation products. An integral part of our approach is to work together with communities and local authorities - primary agents of change - for the adoption of sustainable, context-sensitive practices. In addition to supporting governance at local and national levels, our work is done in coordination with international actors for proper water and sanitation management in the areas where we operate.

An Atlas
mapping global water access and availability.

The Flowing Futures Atlas reviews four years of our WASH strategy (2020-2023), analysing progress, lessons learnt and perspectives. Access to safe water and sanitation is essential to ensure human rights. Flowing Futures explores these links with data, maps and testimonies. The message is clear: water connects us all. As the result of a collective effort, the Atlas does not recount individual projects, but a programmatic vision: WASH affects health, inclusion, climate, children, gender and resilience. The Atlas was born as a strategic and modular tool, useful for advocacy and to orient future strategies. Presented at the headquarters of the Italian Cooperation in Rome, the event involved experts in the field, institutions and NGOs in a round table on the link between the right to water and education, with interventions on emergencies and protracted crises. Flowing Futures documents our work and invites us to see water as the basis of rights, dignity and future.

Our humanitarian response to an unprecedented water crisis applies a community approach.

Throughout 2024, we were at the forefront of the WASH emergency humanitarian response in the Gaza Strip. In an attempt to address the unprecedented water crisis caused by the war, we provided 350 cubic metres of drinking water per day for 351 days to displaced people. With the massive destruction of water and sanitation infrastructure caused by the relentless bombing, and the forced displacement of more than 1.9 million people - almost 90 percent of the Strip’s population -, water distributed by tanker trucks provided a lifeline to those who endured the most difficult circumstances in shelters and makeshift locations. In addition, we applied our community approach by supporting the creation of 15 local hygiene committees that carried out more than 350 hygiene awareness and promotion campaigns, as well as distributing more than 72,000 hygiene kits and non-food essentials items.

Contrasting menstrual poverty and activating collective awareness means promoting access to fundamental rights.

In a world still designed for men, menstrual poverty affects millions of people, in many aspects of their lives. Ensuring menstrual health means ensuring dignity, education, employment and other basic rights. In the countries where we operate, we build safe and accessible toilets in schools, health facilities and population centres, promote consciousness through awareness-raising meetings and ensure access to menstrual products. Our approach to menstrual health and hygiene is based on global-local exchange and mutual learning. Our experiences abroad have enriched our work in Italy, where we conducted the first study on menstrual poverty and launched a six-step manifesto for menstrual justice. The resulting enCYCLOpedia survey is now a global project, with versions for Tanzania and, in development, for other countries. We have promoted initiatives such as the Menstrual Activist Kit, which offers tools for menstrual justice workers, and a menstrual diary to help girls get to know their bodies and monitor their periods. Created in Italy, it is available in English and Swahili and will soon be available in other languages. In Tanzania, we organised the Hedhi Salama Marathon, a run to promote a safe menstrual cycle. With the CHEAP collective, the Legalise Mestruczioni (Legalize Menstruation) campaign brought the issue into the Italian public space, turning posters into tools for awareness. We do not limit ourselves to contrasting menstrual poverty: we build connections between the global and the local, making menstrual justice a collective commitment. Because there is no right to health without menstrual health, nor gender equality without menstrual justice.

Ensuring safe water for medical treatment in hospitals and for prevention in homes.

In 2024, we strengthened our WASH operations in Libya to ensure better access to water and sanitation for the population. We started in the health sector by installing water treatment and disinfection units at the Al Jalaa hospital, thus ensuring safe water for medical procedures and better infection prevention and control. Moreover, we tackled solid waste management by regenerating illegal landfills, distributing containers, drawing up a plan for their management with local authorities and involving associations in community environmental initiatives. We also worked on wastewater management, rehabilitating a 2 km section of the sewage network and providing suction pumps to improve the municipality's drainage operations, thus improving the population's hygienic-environmental conditions. Finally, we enhanced the water supply by rehabilitating five water wells and distributed essential spare parts for maintenance, in cooperation with the local authorities.

Our support to local authorities has enabled the rehabilitation of eight health facilities in Ukraine.

In Ukraine, during 2024, we intervened with integrated emergency response projects in different areas of the country. In particular, our WASH in Health work - together with the Swiss Cooperation and also thanks to the support of the Croce Bianca and Medici dell'Alto Adige per il Mondo - enabled the rehabilitation of hospital wards, 13 sanitation/health services, the distribution of emergency management and cleaning kits, as well as the organisation of training for health facility staff. We supported public water supply agencies whose work was impeded by the effects of the ongoing conflict. We did this by providing machinery, equipment and spare parts for the maintenance and repair of the water network and infrastructure. Finally, we distributed over 10,000 hygiene kits, contextualised and adapted to the different needs of the population.

Managing emotions and overcoming stress and trauma through art.

In Tanzania, our intervention in education includes art therapy workshops for children with disabilities, in need of psychological support, and survivors of abuse. The workshops were facilitated by trained staff with the support of a toolkit that was designed by WeWorld in Tanzania, with the support of experts in art therapy. The toolkit will be translated and contextualised for use in other countries where we work. The art therapy course consisted of 10 sessions in which, through the use of artistic expression, children were able to rework their emotions and learn to develop positive ways of adapting. In Kenya, we have also conducted art therapy sessions, with a specific focus on children with sensory disabilities. These sessions are part of our Child Sponsorship programme and are also financed by the people in Italy who donate their 5x1000 to us (the share of the personal income tax that can be turned into support for a non-profit organisation).

A campaign to reshape the school calendar in Italy and promote a school model without discrimination.

Together with the activist duo Mammadimerda, we collected almost 70,000 signatures to demand the reshaping of the Italian school calendar. With 200 school days and one of the longest summer breaks in Europe, the current system amplifies inequalities, penalising children and adolescents in more vulnerable conditions. The absence of a continuous school offer increases the risk of dispersion and loss of skills, as demonstrated by the experience of Frequenza200, our programme that has been fighting educational poverty in Italian peripheral areas for over ten years and for which the San Zeno Foundation supported us in 2024. Our campaign on the remodelling of the school calendar calls for schools to be open during the summer, compulsory full-time education from 3 to 14 years of age, and a new school day that guarantees quality and inclusion for all.

REBUILT IN SYRIA

In Syria, we carry out multi-sectoral interventions in remote and underserved rural areas in the Governorates of Aleppo, Deir-ez-Zor and al-Raqqa to ensure access to quality education in safe and inclusive learning environments, thanks mainly to the support of the European Union and the Italian Cooperation. Starting from the active involvement of the entire education community, our interventions aim to identify and reduce the main barriers of access, whether physical (rehabilitation of schools with a gender- and disability-sensitive approaches), cultural (awareness-raising and training programmes on education and child protection issues) or academic (non-formal education programmes to facilitate access to or stay in school with actions to improve children's well-being and socio-emotional learning). Finally, a special focus is placed on the continuous professional development of teaching and educational staff, to provide them with the knowledge and skills necessary to ensure inclusive and safe learning environments, even in contexts with extremely limited resources.

Our Child Sponsorship programme has a community reach.

“It struck us to see with our own eyes how much supporting a single child can make a difference to the whole community,” says a fundraising colleague who visited the schools where we work through the Child Sponsorship programme in Kenya in February 2024. “Over the years, we have managed to ensure access to clean water and to build gender-segregated toilets in the schools.

And not only that: in the schools we can also provide hot meals, which is another very basic right we have been working on for years working for years and which allows many to come to school.” In Cambodia, Son Phearak has been teaching for 12 years in one of the schools where we operate the Child Sponsorship programme in the Kampong Chhnang province: “I think the school system can help children in more vulnerable conditions by paying attention to them and motivating them. The project that WeWorld is implementing in our school is not only strengthening the capacities of students, teachers and all school staff, but it also supports and encourages children to come to school through home visits and scholarships, and most importantly, it encourages us to build strong relationships with parents and the community”.

With our youth participation and active citizenship initiatives, we offer access to knowledge, skills and tools for greater awareness of global dynamics related to human rights, environmental justice and gender equality. Our aim is to strengthen the capacity for action and transformation of young generations in these areas, promoting concrete opportunities to fight social and environmental injustice and discrimination together, working for their right to the future.

YOUNG PEOPLE WHO PARTICIPATED IN DECISION-MAKING PROCESSES AND/OR DEMONSTRATED ACTIVE ENGAGEMENT/ACTIVISM

The format of Be A Change Maker, in its 3rd edition in 2024, is a free ongoing training-capacitating programme to strengthen theoretical knowledge and technical and professional skills related to youth activism for social and environmental justice. During the year, the selected group of 30 young people aged 18-35 focused on the nexus between business and human rights and on sustainable production chains. For 7 editions, our My Revolution projects have been accompanying young people aged 14-25 to reflect on social and political changes to be brought about in their local contexts and at the European level. In 2024 we involved more than 80 young people in 2 conferences at the EU Parliament and 4 workshops in Italy on the use of art as a tool for change. The national debates programme Exponi le tue Idee reached its 10th edition in 2024. The meetings focused on agri-food production systems, responsible consumption and the link between agriculture and sustainable development. 240 students participated in the playoff and final rounds. In total, 70 per cent of those involved said they had increased their awareness of the topics of the debates.

Food Security, Livelihood and Local Development

Our response to promote food security starts with caregivers and children, to ensure that they are better nourished and able to cope with food shocks. Closely linked to this programme is our commitment to training and creating job opportunities together with national and local authorities, as well as promoting income-generating activities so that those in the most marginalised conditions can achieve greater self-sufficiency and economic stability.

Ensuring food security through the use of an integrated and climate resilient approach.

In Afghanistan, we supported the most vulnerable groups of the population in the Herat province with an integrated approach of food assistance, women’s economic empowerment, agricultural capacity building and community resilience building. 1,100 women-led households affected by food insecurity received monetary assistance - Cash for Food - to cover their food needs. In parallel, 180 women received technical training followed by the distribution of small ruminants for home rearing. 500 rural smallholders were able to improve agricultural production by receiving cereal seeds and through the introduction of climate-resilient cultivation techniques. In the intervention areas, the climate crisis response system was strengthened through the construction and rehabilitation of community infrastructure, involving 430 vulnerable households in a Cash-for-Work programme.

WOMEN-LED FAMILIES IN VULNERABLE CONDITIONS PLACED IN A CASH ASSISTANCE PROGRAMME

We tackle food insecurity by combining different modalities of cash assistance.

In northern Lebanon, we addressed food insecurity and socioeconomic vulnerability by combining different response modalities. With the Cash plus approach, we provided cash transfers to cover the essential needs of selected households, complemented by support for starting or recovering income-generating activities, technical training, input distributions and targeted coaching, particularly for women and young people. Other families received food vouchers that could be used in local shops, supplemented by distributions of fresh vegetables and fruits, increasing the quantity and improving the quality of food. In addition, small-scale farmers received direct support for means of production, fostering the recovery of the agricultural sector. These interventions have contributed to reducing the food deficit of the households involved, diversifying their diets, and limiting the use of negative mechanisms to meet basic needs. Finally, support for income-generating activities has promoted greater long-term sustainability.

The impact of our monetary assistance interventions through the voices of those who experience crises and work to counter them.

In Afghanistan, thanks also to the support of ChildFund Alliance members, we carry out multi-sectoral interventions to ensure support for rural populations and in particular for women, who are often left alone to head their families.

Among those who benefited from Cash for Food interventions during 2024, i.e. regular monetary transfers to be able to buy basic necessities, and seeds to grow cereals, we met Safiya, a 50-year-old woman from the village of Doghi Sabzaki, in the province of Herat.

of food and wood for heating, in a context where as a woman she has no opportunity to support her family: “In the last few years, since my husband passed away, I have had to try to work because there was no one to provide for the household expenses. If it were not for your help, we would have had no way to grow wheat, buy food and wood, and improve our condition. This hope sustains me through the challenges, fuelling my desire to ensure a brighter tomorrow for my beloved family.”

In 2024, we also continued to support the people of Ukraine, whom we have been working alongside since the outbreak of the conflict in February 2022.

We have engaged in Cash for Health and Cash for Repair activities: the former to provide access to psychosocial support and to purchase medicines; the latter to provide employment opportunities while ensuring repairs to essential water and sanitation infrastructure, as well as housing.

These initiatives aim to support especially vulnerable population groups, such as women, the elderly, people with disabilities and children.

Vasyl, a Ukrainian citizen from Donetsk and a member of WeWorld’s staff in the Kharkiv Oblast, has been supervising the repair and rehabilitation of sanitary facilities and water supply networks: “I am very worried about the future of Ukraine: living conditions are difficult and many people need assistance. Yet, thanks to these activities I remain confident and I am happy to be able to count on the support of WeWorld, with which we are carrying out projects that are really helping the country.”

Preventing acute child malnutrition and strengthening the resilience of communities are our main objectives.

In the Douentza region of Mali, the crisis that has lasted for more than a decade has generated many internally displaced people, who have been taken in by families

We ensure that young people with disabilities have access to vocational training schools.

In the context of the protracted Syrian crisis, people with disabilities face numerous obstacles to accessing primary and secondary education, as well as vocational training opportunities - enabling them to acquire the necessary skills to be able to start income-generating activities and pursue independent living in rural areas, in a context of extreme vulnerability and chronic food insecurity. In 2024 we supported both groups with integrated interventions to reduce food insecurity, prevent acute child malnutrition and strengthen community resilience. Food assistance through Cash for Food for the most food-deficit families was complemented by specific nutritional support for children under the age of two, with the regular distribution of fortified infant flours. This complementary feeding to breast milk has ensured a healthy nutritional status, preventing acute malnutrition which, if left untreated, can be fatal. Mothers and caregivers participated in awareness-raising and training sessions on good infant feeding practices and the preparation of meals with high nutritional value and from locally available products.

livelihoods with dignity. We strive to ensure access to vocational training opportunities for young people with disabilities and contribute to the development of an appropriate and inclusive social and working environment. In 2024, we supported vocational training institutions with rehabilitation work and the provision of equipment necessary for the start-up of new courses, supported teaching staff with training courses and awareness-raising activities on the topic of inclusion, and promoted the use of the skills assessment to ensure an individualised educational approach. In addition, we have organised vocational training courses for young people with disabilities, which include apprenticeships and the delivery of vocational starter kits.

Gender and Protection

Our intervention in gender and protection aims to ensure that all people can fully claim and exercise their human rights and agency without being subject to discrimination. We do this by working for gender equality, deconstructing existing stereotypes, countering gender-based violence and ensuring access to sexual, reproductive and mental health for all people. Furthermore, we strive to build pathways to social cohesion, peace and to guarantee human rights through the involvement of different actors in each area of intervention.

We strengthen the economic autonomy of indigenous women by working on building new networks.

In order to promote the autonomy of young indigenous women in Brazil, through a contextualised development approach, community organisation, and tackling gender inequalities in the field of work, through our CUNHÃ CRODÍ (“strong woman” in Tupi and Kariri languages)

project we implemented training sessions on women’s leadership, feminist economics and collective self-management to create a network of knowledge multipliers, expanding women’s protagonism in the construction of sustainable strategies for their communities. Our project, implemented thanks to the support of our Brazilian partners, involved 480 women between the ages of 18 and 35, belonging to 30 indigenous groups spread across the Brazilian states of Ceará, Bahia, Pernambuco and Alagoas. To increase the visibility of the actions as much as possible, and enhance the social impact of the intervention, we also promoted the dissemination of scientific research, teaching technologies, pedagogical tools, publications and good practices.

Feminist
Chat: a space for informal and dialogue,

a format that is spreading.

The 14th edition of the WeWorld
Festival Milano set a new record:
4,000 attendees in three days, confirming the importance of an open and inclusive space to discuss gender equality and stereotypes. With the topic “Let’s get out of the bubble”, the Festival brought talks, movies, music and performances to BASE Milano, involving guests such as Azzurra Rinaldi, Giada Biaggi and Fabio Roia. A success was the format Chiacchierata Femminista (Feminist Chat), created as an intimate circle of women and men, a space for listening and informal dialogue inspired by the moments of sharing and confrontation that gave birth to feminisms. A safe and non-judgmental place where we can feel listened to and free to express ourselves. During the rest of the year, the format moved out of Milan, becoming widespread and taking the debate to new cities, expanding the conversation on the condition of women.

PEOPLE PARTICIPATED IN TRAINING ACTIVITIES ON THE PREVENTION AND MITIGATION OF GENDER AND SEXUAL VIOLENCE, AND HARMFUL PRACTICES

In Kenya, despite a favourable legal framework for gender equality, deep inequalities persist, particularly in pastoral and agro-pastoral communities. Narok County, where we operate, has the highest number of cases of gender-based violence, female genital mutilation (FGM) and early pregnancies. In 2024, in collaboration with the Italian Cooperation, we promoted educational programmes and awareness-raising activities on sexual and reproductive health, women's rights and the prevention of harmful traditional practices, such as FGM. On the occasion of the 16-day global campaign of activism against gender-based violence, we organised, together with the Narok County Gender Department, an awareness-raising event with the participation of local institutions, during which EnCYCLOpedia was launched, an analysis of the main global challenges to achieving menstrual justice and possible solutions for concrete change.

Participatory photography promotes social cohesion and is a tool for asserting one's place in society.

Within the framework of our regional project Kujenga Amani Pamoja, in the spring of 2024, the photographic workshop PHOTOVOICE - Women See Many Things was implemented in the Swahili coast, an area shared by Kenya, Tanzania and Mozambique, characterised by strong socio-economic and political instability. The workshop was developed through three participatory photography workshops, involving more than 30 women between the ages of 18 and 35, and resulted in a body of more than 180 photos, exhibited in community spaces in the three countries. In the areas of origin of the participants, being 'young' and especially 'women' can match with the need to claim a public space designed solely for men, overcoming gender discrimination; it can translate into pride in showing how their work has a central function in their society. Photography has allowed these young women to show their vision and assert their space in society.

We involve our private donors in the events we organise against gender-based violence.

In 2024 we enriched the proposals aimed at companies with team-building events in support of our projects to tackle gender violence. The focus of the initiatives was mainly on sports: we were Charity Partner of StraWoman, the most important women's rights rally in Italy, a 5 km race to show our commitment to the fight against gender violence. The Spinathlon was the second event, inaugurated in 2024: a combination of sport and solidarity in which colleagues took part in spinning sessions within the company premises. A fundraiser for our Spazi Donna (Women's Spaces) was associated with each spinning session. Spinathlon was an opportunity not only to do sport, but also to raise awareness of gender equality within the company. In order to consolidate their partnership with us and strengthen their social commitment, the companies enthusiastically welcomed the exhibition 'Side Effects: when women don't give up' by the Italian photographer Isabella Balena in their spaces. The project develops through the portraits of 17 women who have decided not to keep silent and counter violence and stereotypes of various natures. Finally, the most significant event of 2024 was the Milan Marathon, the city's most important relay race, created to unite solidarity and sports. Almost 150 runners and 13 companies were involved to support our Women's Spaces. In many cases, the event was the kick-off for a broader partnership: corporate volunteering, awareness-raising meetings on gender equality, joint communication campaigns and many other initiatives.

Environment and Climate

Our response to address the environmental and social risks of climate change involves implementing positive, peaceful preparedness and risk reduction solutions. A key aspect of our action is the active participation of affected communities in the management, conservation and restoration of local natural resources. Our programme also includes action towards and with institutions, alongside many other civil society organisations, to promote production and consumption models for a fair, inclusive and evidence-based transition.

We promote national and European campaigns to support a law that compels companies to be sustainable.

In 2024, we worked to promote the European Corporate Sustainability Due Diligence Directive (CSDD). The directive obliges large companies to prevent misconduct and remedy violations of the rights of employees, communities and the environment.

Through our actions, we have demanded: mandatory transition plans for companies to reduce CO2 emissions; community involvement; civil liability and more justice for victims. We have done this with different documents, letters, meetings with citizens, companies, associations and political decision makers. We promoted the Italian Impresa2030 campaign, supported the European Justice is Everybody's Business campaign and the European Coalition for Corporate Justice network. The Directive was approved and published in June 2024. We continue to defend it and demand that it be transposed in Italy with a law in defence of citizenship, consumers and the environment.

The Directive represents a unique opportunity to make a real leap forward in environmental and social justice. Let us defend it against recent attempts to render it ineffective.

The conservation of vulnerable ecosystems becomes a livelihood opportunity.

In Mozambique, in the Maputo Bay, we work to define and implement climate change mitigation and adaptation strategies for vulnerable ecosystems, in particular mangroves. These species play a fundamental role in stabilising coastal areas and sequestering carbon. Their conservation, valorisation and restoration is therefore promoted, ensuring environmental protection and a sustainable source of income for the communities in the area, particularly for small farmers, fishermen and fisherwomen on the Inhaca Island and in the coastal zone. Actions include the rehabilitation and sustainable management of degraded mangrove ecosystems, accompanied by environmental education programmes targeting local communities, with a special focus on children and youth, as well as the dissemination of alternative low-impact farming techniques and activities. Finally, by analysing existing barriers, we promote gender awareness in schools and women's empowerment initiatives.

LOCAL AUTHORITIES SUPPORTED TO INCLUDE RISK REDUCTION AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION ACTIONS IN DEVELOPMENT PLANS

Spaces for dialogue between young participants in our climate and environmental justice trainings at WeWorld Festivals.

Raising awareness among young people on climate and environmental justice, promoting their activism and giving space to their will for change, has always been central to our projects. With this in mind, in 2024 we continued to synergise some of our training courses for young people focused on these topics, creating several activities within the WeWorld Festivals in Milan and Bologna. One of these is Chiacchierata Attivista

(Activist Chat), a format of collective and participatory discussion, which during this 14th edition of the WeWorld Festival Milano involved a number of people who took part in our Be A Change Maker training course, together with activists from Extinction Rebellion, Ultima Generazione, members of civil society and citizens, and local and national policy-makers, with a special focus on the 2024 European elections. According to those who took part in the event, it was an opportunity that offered a space to freely express one's opinion and greatly improve one's understanding of climate justice decision-making and public policy. Some of the people who participated in Be A Change Maker were also involved during the WeWorld Festival Bologna as a jury for the award for the best social documentary on climate and environmental justice, named after our colleague Andrea Zani, who passed away in 2024. The prize was awarded to the Brazilian film The Buriti Flower by Crowã João Salaviza and Renée Nader Messoria, a film that challenges us today about the loss of connection between humans, territory, and culture.

3RD EDITION

OF THE BE A CHANGE MAKER TRAINING COURSE TO STRENGTHEN YOUTH ACTIVISM ON CLIMATE CHANGE ISSUES

Tackling the deterioration and appropriation of natural resources exacerbated by climate change.

In the West Bank, in addition to our humanitarian response in WASH, we have implemented a series of high-impact development interventions throughout 2024. With the PONTE project, thanks to the support of the Italian Cooperation, we installed 19,000 metres of irrigation network - an unconventional water irrigation scheme - to benefit 51 farmers and their families in the communities of Tayasir and Aqaba, in the northern governorate of Tubas. In addition, we installed a solar system to pump water from a local spring in Ein Al Beida, in the Jordan Valley, benefiting over 20 people engaged in agriculture and 115,000 square metres of land. With these interventions, we have addressed the problems of water scarcity, unemployment and food insecurity, contributing to the livelihoods and stability of communities facing policies of natural resources appropriation, exacerbated by the effects of climate change.

We support local associations throughout Italy who work on concrete solutions to tackle the environmental crisis.

Thanks to the support of the Italian Cooperation and in collaboration with other partners in Italy, we have included the topic of the climate crisis in our global citizenship education programmes through trainings in 23 schools to involve young people and put in place 'peer to peer' actions, so that the older students teach the younger ones how to take care of their own local environment. We have also financed 20 local associations that are concretely putting in place solutions to tackle the environmental and climate crisis together with the people living in the areas affected by its effects. From Agrigento, via the Terra dei Fuochi, to the Mercati della Terra in Lombardy, our action has involved young people, civil society and institutions, to demand concrete changes together.

Tackling climate change is the challenge of the century. The model that led to biocide in Campania is the same one that is aggravating climate change on a global scale.

Our work is based on humanitarian principles with a grassroots approach, intervening in emergencies directly on the front line and in close contact with those affected. In 2024, we responded to major, often complex and protracted humanitarian crises. We intervened in emergencies caused by both armed conflicts and extreme weather events, assisting people in the most vulnerable conditions, who are too often forgotten.

Right to the future

The future belongs to the new generations, but today's societies are still only designed for adults. It is time to change perspective. Guaranteeing their right to the future means building, together with children and young people, a world of real opportunities, equity and sustainability, and adopting policies inspired by their needs and by the principles of intergenerational justice. Together with ChildFund Alliance, we have collected and amplified their voices in 41 countries: they demand rights, better living conditions and to be heard.

Childfund Alliance World Index

The ChildFund Alliance World Index on the Rights of Women and Children (CFA Index) analyses the living conditions of women and children around the world, monitoring their rights and the challenges they face every day. Created as the WeWorld Index in 2015, it is a key tool to promote gender-sensitive policies for future generations. In November 2024, we presented the Index in New York at the United Nations, contributing to the global debate. ChildFund Alliance, of which WeWorld is the only Italian member since 2020, works in more than 70 countries to protect children and their communities, counter poverty and respond to emergencies.

The ranking

The ChildFund Alliance World Index 2024 presents a ranking of 157 countries based on the implementation of the rights of women, children and adolescents.

Focus: the voices of children and adolescents on their right to the future

The 2024 edition of the ChildFund Alliance World Index is dedicated to the right to the future for children and adolescents. Through this perspective, we analysed the challenges they face in a world marked by multiple crises. The report includes the results of a global consultation with 10,000 children in 41 countries, who shared their dreams, fears and expectations about the future.

The 5 priorities for the future

In the last phase of the consultation, children and adolescents had the opportunity to make their voices heard, indicating priorities for intervention as well as actions that adults should take to ensure a better future for them. They proposed solutions, recounted experiences and shared dreams, fears and expectations.

A moment of authentic listening, focusing on their ideas to build a fairer tomorrow. In particular, they indicated five priorities:

The people we work with and for are at the centre of our action and our main stakeholder. In 2024, we worked for a concrete improvement in the living conditions of more than 5.6 million people, particularly women (31%) and children (44%).

We have intervened to support the groups of the population in more vulnerable conditions in the different realities in which we work, who are sometimes less visible but no less at risk, such as the elderly (more than 370,000) and people with disabilities (more than 230,000). Particular attention is given to those who have had to flee because of war or other serious threats to their lives, abandoning their homes, loved ones and jobs. At the same time, we have directed many of our actions towards more than 1.5 million internally displaced people and migrants in different parts of the world, including Italy. We have also intervened to protect those who, due to the sudden and acute worsening of weather conditions, have seen their resilience compromised. Through our awareness-raising activities, we have reached more than 33.7 million people. We have been present in Italy and other Member States of the European Union in schools, where we have provided teachers and students with the tools to understand the complex global dynamics in order to become become involved active citizens and to provide youths with the international level and to provide the youngest with the adequate knowledge to adopt more supportive and sustainable development models. We have organised public events to discuss socially relevant topics such as conflicts, migration, food insecurity, gender equality, lack of access to water and climate change, in order to fully understand their causes, analyse their consequences and propose possible solutions.

We have integrated awareness-raising actions in all the countries where we operate, to strengthen the sustainability of our actions and make the people we work for protagonists and agents of change in their communities.

Vision

We strive for a better world where everyone, especially women and children, has equal opportunities and rights, with access to resources, healthcare, education, and dignified work. A world in which the environment is a shared resource to be respected and preserved; where war, violence, and exploitation are banned. A world that belongs to everyone, where no one is left behind.

Mission

We work alongside individuals on the geographic, economic, and social margins to overcome inequality and build a fairer future - one that upholds the dignity and diversity of people and the planet. We support individuals and communities with humanitarian assistance in crisis contexts and promote pathways to self-determination and development, contributing to structural change and creating opportunities for all.

WeWorld: an important ally in continuing to assist children in extreme situations.

For Educo, WeWorld is an important ally in continuing to respond to humanitarian crises and support the most vulnerable children. Being members of the same network, Childfund Alliance, allows us to be complementary in our humanitarian experience and to work side by side to assist children in emergencies, but also during transit and in places of refuge. In 2024, WeWorld developed vital work in extreme situations such as those caused by the conflicts in Ukraine and Gaza. With them, we have provided appropriate responses to a context that, unfortunately, remains uncertain and changing. Millions of children suffer the severe consequences of humanitarian crises, be they armed conflicts, extreme weather events or violence. Data like these are reported in our work World Index 2024, which monitors the evolution of children's rights and in which the protagonists of our work, the children, are heard and have a voice.

Pilar Orenes
General Director of Educo

WeWorld's efforts promote the empowerment of women and girls in Kenya.

Before we left for Kenya with WeWorld, we did not know what we were going to encounter; we kept our minds and hearts open and what we found was an atmosphere of great hope and determination. We were very impressed by the strength and desire for redemption of the women and girls we met. In the Narok County, we visited some of the schools built by WeWorld and met the activist - and WeWorld partner - Sereti Nabaala, who, with her association, supports girls who are survivors of female genital mutilation. What WeWorld does in Kenya is not just to give material support, but to bring awareness and promote empowerment. This experience has shown us how changing something infinitely small for us can have a gigantic impact on the people who live here. It is possible to change things.

In 2024, in Syria, WeWorld continued to work for the inclusion of people with disabilities.

In Syria, people with disabilities have endured exclusion and isolation for many years, from family settings to schools and society, extending to employment opportunities. To promote equality, justice and counter social stigma, our work during 2024 continued to focus on inclusivity and integration, by embedding these values into the activities we implemented. This has included upgrading schools to make them more inclusive, training staff, promoting community awareness, and advancing vocational training for women and people with disabilities, linking them to the job market. Our goal is a better, more inclusive society for all.

Soha Fattal
WeWorld Coordinator for Education in Aleppo

Supporting WeWorld means taking concrete action for people living on the margins.

Humanity is experiencing a paradoxical moment. The more technology develops, the more the logic of the strongest seems to prevail. The more prosperity grows, the more the polarisation between the few rich and the millions of poor intensifies. Wars are getting ever closer, and everyone risks going astray, in search of our own humanity. Businesses today have a historic responsibility: to become agents of justice, inclusion and future. Supporting WeWorld means acting concretely for people who live on the margins, to build economies that leave no one behind. It is not philanthropy; it is strategic vision: a company that looks far ahead cannot close its eyes on the world.

Paolo Iacci
Member of WeWorld's Advisory Board, Professor in 'Human Resources Management' at Università Statale of Milan

Working with WeWorld has marked my life as a leader and an indigenous woman in a very positive way.

The first contact with WeWorld was to do a project together on indigenous women in Brazil. It was a beautiful work, with great learning and complicity. We worked on various initiatives together and I had the opportunity to go to the WeWorld Festival Milan in May 2024, which covered topics that are extremely important to us in Brazil, but also much more advanced topics in terms of climate, gender and women's rights. I attended every day, I met the WeWorld Women's Space in Milan, I had wonderful conversations with wonderful people: it was an experience that marked my life as a leader and an indigenous woman, a great opportunity to increase my knowledge. In my country, we were going through a very difficult time because of the floods in the south, and I was able to show abroad how we are managing the indigenous movement, the whole issue of gender, violence against women and especially the criminalisation of indigenous leaders.

Patrícia Krinsi Atikum Pankararé
Brazilian indigenous activist for environmental and human rights, WeWorld collaborator in Brazil

A commitment that has been going on for years to counter gender-based violence and create opportunities.

Collaborating with WeWorld over the last years has been a great privilege, the chance to build concrete paths for women's rights in a complex territory, characterised by strong challenges and at the same time great potential, contributing to the growth and change of the broader context in which they live. From the opening of the Spazio Donna in Naples, which is now 10 years old, to the inauguration of the semi-autonomy house within the SFERA project, to the projects with schools and young people, we have joined forces to promote opportunities and counter gender-based violence. A commitment that continues, because only together can we make our communities fairer and more inclusive.
